Trail Miles: 10 to 20 Miles

Lake Guntersville State Park boasts a 16-mile horse trail. The path follows the terrain, varying from steep inclines to lazy knolls. It passes remnants of old home places with chimneys still standing, what remains of a grist mill, and rock stacked in piles having been cleared from fields once farmed. It is recommended to carry water for horses as the trail does not guarantee a source of refreshment. The cool waters of the Guntersville Reservoir flank the trail. However, it is not always easily accessible. Heavy rains make it difficult for horses to tread the soil, marring up instead. An ample parking area heads the trail that affords riders a place for primitive camping. Horses can be highlined to nearby trees while at rest. Bathroom facilities are located directly across the street from the horse trail at the Town Creek Campground, where additional campsites are also available.
